

North Carolina Aggies Confident of Winning From Hilltoppers in Big Game

AGGIES THINK THEY WILL BE CONQUERORS ON SATURDAY

Jack Hegarty's Eleven Shows Such Improvement Since Navy Game That He Is Waxing Confident.

Gallaudet, With Temple Date Canceled, Will Now Spend Remaining Time Preparing for Catholic University.

Here's First One

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—Fred Schumm reported yesterday that a bet of $500 even money had been made that the Navy would beat the Army at the Polo Grounds on November 27. He added that there was plenty of Princeton money on the Yale-Princeton game. Princeton is offering 10 to 6, while Yale is asking 2 to 1. The odds on Harvard to defeat Brown have shifted from 10 to 7 up to 10 to 6, with $1,000 offered at those figures. Schumm offers 10 to 6 that Harvard will beat Yale and says that there are no takers.

By LOUIS A. DOUGHER.

Jack Hegarty's North Carolina Aggies are coming to the Hilltop Saturday expecting to defeat Georgetown. This is the word from the camp at Raleigh, following unexpected improvement in the daily practice of the Farmers since the victory over the Naval Academy. Whether they will be successful or not is another question. The Farmers will have to have a sturdy defense to keep Gilroy, Wall and Leighty from getting away on long runs behind perfect interference, and their own attack will have to be strong to gain any appreciable distance against the hard charging of the Hilltop forwards.

Even if the Aggies do get away to a good start, they are sure to be handicapped by a lack of capable substitutes. Georgetown has two complete eleveners able to keep up the struggle, but the Farmers will have trouble if they meet with many injuries.

Georgetown will start against the Aggies with the same line-up that ran away from Fordham in the first five minutes. Cusack and Corcoran will be the ends; Ward and O'Connor the tackles; Mahlum and Capt. "Botchy" Harrow, guards, with Fitzgerald at center. Jackie Malone, because of his clever punting, will start at quarterback. Johnny Gilroy, "Petie" Wall and Leighty will be in the backfield. With the single exception of O'Connor, the eleven freshmen, this line-up has been together most of the season, and is thoroughly experienced in Al Exendine's system of play.

Today's scrimmage practice will be held at the Hilltop, every play to be used Saturday being tried out by regulars and substitutes. If Georgetown finds it necessary to put in second-string players, they will know the signals and have had experience in going through the various formations demanded.

Last week's rest has done the Blue and Gray eleven considerable good. The aches and pains resulting from the Fordham victory have all disappeared, and it will be an eleven going in going Saturday which takes the field for Georgetown.

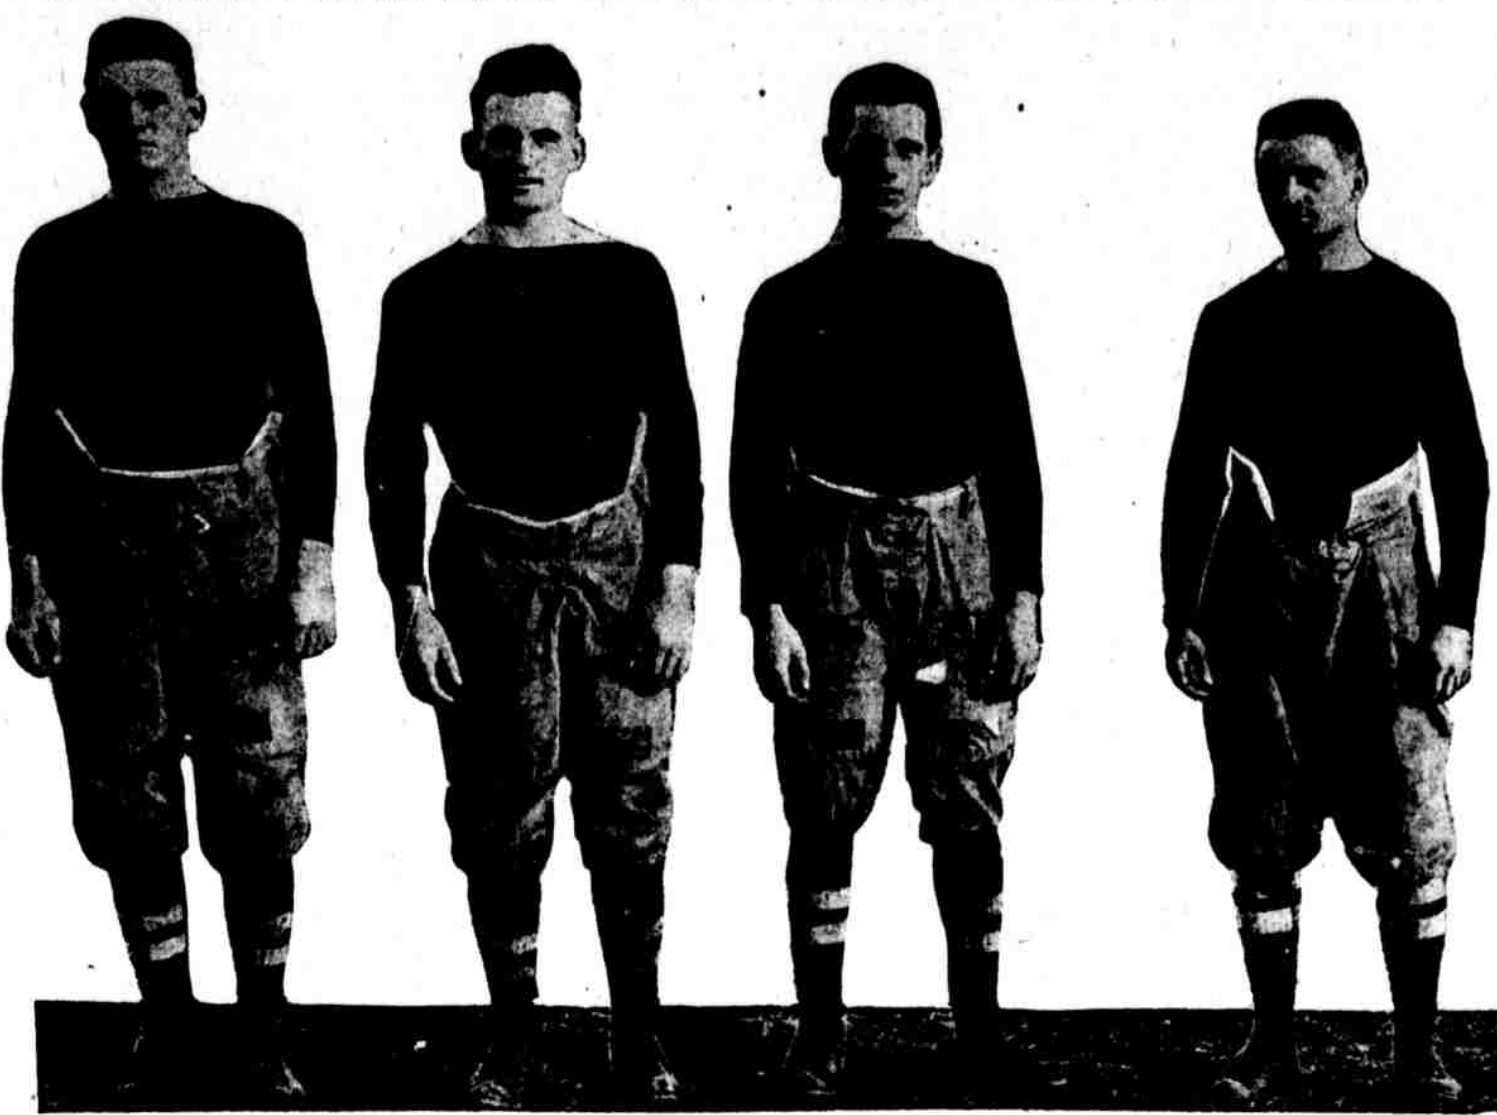

Gallaudet has no game for this week. Temple University, of Philadelphia, having canceled it. Coach Wayne Hart will take advantage of this opportunity to give his eleven a rest. Gallaudet, not impressed so very much by the Brooklanders' gridiron successes this season, will from now on work for the Turkey Day combat with Catholic University. This should be one of the best games ever played by these teams.

Georgetown men are showing interest in Virginia's contest Saturday with South Carolina because the Hilltoppers will tackle the Palmetto boys a week later, thus allowing of comparison between Georgetown and Virginia.

Howard Berry Stands by Coaches Who Fired Him

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 10.—Howard Berry, who recently resigned from the University of Pennsylvania varsity football team, will be given a chance to try for the eleven next season, according to reports which were circulated around Franklin Field yesterday afternoon. At his own request the board of coaches held a special meeting and heard Berry's statement. He denied everything that was said in the newspapers concerning the injustice handed out to him by the coaches and agreed with the coaches in everything. Coach "By" Dickson, when asked about the matter, stated that the board of coaches had written a report concerning Berry which will be given to Berry. What the report is and the decision Berry will make is unknown.

NORTH CAROLINA AGGIES COUNT ON THESE LADS

BURR CHAMBERLAIN NOW COACHING YALE

"Buck" Church, Washington Boy, Clings to Place at End on Eli Varsity.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 10.—Yale again will have more football coaches than she has players. The already big squad of mentors was enlarged today by Burr Chamberlain, captain of the 1898 team, and Howard Jones, former head coach.

Today's scrimmage practice will close actual football before the Princeton game. Some of the coaches favor it in the three positions mentioned, and it is likely that tomorrow Hieginbotham will be found at left end, Haddock at left tackle, and Kent at right guard.

Scott's injured thumb has improved and he will report tomorrow. The coaches expect to use him during part of the Princeton game. Guernsey was at full back again yesterday.

The practice consisted of an hour's signal rehearsal, followed by dummy work. Jackie Malone, because of his clever punting, will start at quarterback. Johnny Gilroy, "Petie" Wall and Leighty will be in the backfield. With the single exception of O'Connor, the eleven freshmen, this line-up has been together most of the season, and is thoroughly experienced in Al Exendine's system of play.

Today's scrimmage practice will be held at the Hilltop, every play to be used Saturday being tried out by regulars and substitutes. If Georgetown finds it necessary to put in second-string players, they will know the signals and have had experience in going through the various formations demanded.

Calls Yale Outclassed By Rivals on Gridiron

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 10.—"The Harvard and Princeton teams outclass Yale in every department of play," said Dr. Billy Bull, the Yale football coach, today. "All we can do is to beat Princeton. It is to hope that things break well for us. But you never can tell what a Yale team is going to do."

"One of the greatest weaknesses in the Yale team is a lack of football savvy. The men don't show the natural football intelligence which should be altered for the Princeton game, but very little can be done for the backfield. Capt. Eddie Mahan, of the Harvard team, has more football stuff in him than any man I have ever seen, and I've seen a lot. I believe he is the greatest all-around player on the field today."

Brickley's Playing May Cancel Saturday's Game

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—Trinity College's determination to play George Brickley, former member of Cornell Black Athletics, on its football team may cause the cancellation of the Columbia game, scheduled for Saturday. Brickley, who is now at Trinity, is an answer from the Connecticut college today.

Virginia Team Claims South Atlantic Title

Orange and Blue Points to Comparative Scores to Show Superiority Over Competitors—No Fears Felt for Two Remaining Games on Schedule.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Nov. 10.—Although Virginia still has two more games on this year's football season, they are not giving her much cause for worry right now, after her remarkable showing against Vanderbilt on November 6. The two games that are ensuing are those with the Universities of South and North Carolina, on November 13 and 20, respectively. They both are played away from Charlottesville, one in Columbia, S. C., and the other at Richmond. The strength of the Palmetto State side is almost impossible to gauge, but reports are that their team is the strongest in years.

They have defeated this season North Carolina A. and M., which in its turn trounced the Navy; the comparative scores route would give the South Carolinians a strong eleven.

Football supporters of the Charlottesville institution are not anxious over the outcome, however. Though the team makes no claims to the Southern championship, but rather plays the brand of football that makes these claims, it would seem from the season's records of the various eleveners that the locals have a manifest superiority over the other eleveners in this section.

First, as to Georgetown, there is no basis of comparison save that of comparative scores, and by this measure Virginia has a clear superiority. Harvard defeated Virginia, 9 to 0, and Princeton, 10 to 0. Princeton defeated the 13 to 0. That would seem to place Virginia about three touchdowns superior to Georgetown. Ed Donnelly, who umpired the Yale-Virginia contest, and who has seen Georgetown in action, says that he believes the locals about two touchdowns better than the Washington team.

Doubtless Washington and Lee will also come forward with a claim to superiority, but this will not be taken seriously by any local taxation zealots. The Georges have been successful this season in not being beaten, but the eleveners have not been of a very large caliber. Before their strongest attack was that with Indiana two weeks ago, which resulted in a 7 to 7 tie. Indiana is no great peanuts this fall. The Virginia team has eliminated Georgia and Vanderbilt. There are still to be contested Auburn and Georgia Tech. Auburn beat Georgia Tech, 10 to 0, and Georgia Tech, 10 to 0. The Athens beat Mercer, 6 to 7, and Saturday beat Mercer, 6 to 7, but its attack with Vandy will tell the tale on its claim. Tech has but lately shown its strength. Vanderbilt eliminated Tennessee; Tech did the same for Alabama, and Syracuse has shown no evidence of a championship team this year. Virginia's record is one which she is exceedingly proud of, and one which will go down in her football history in huge letters. She has been defeated but once this season, and that by three of the best eleveners in the South Atlantic section. Her line has been crossed twice, but each time by a long and rather fluky run by a member of the opposing team. She has shown possession of an all-smothering defense, which was able to eat up plays any of the opposing teams might try. The Princeton eleven, which came an unstoppable offense, one which was a mystery to McGugin's doubts team and which melted Vandy's team five touchdowns.

The interference which the Virginia team would furnish to its own punter, whether he had recovered a fumble, was running back a punt, making an end run, or bucking the line, was formed in a flash, and did wonders in blocking the Vandy men; its excellence brought forth unstinted praises from the large number of out-of-town reporters who were there looking at the game and who exclaimed that they had never seen such perfect interference, or interference so quickly turned. This is another point in which Vandy's eleven is outclassed.

It takes a good line to block an opponent's punt. This Virginia did six times against Vanderbilt, and many more times against its other opponents this fall. Its own line has been a stone wall against any foreign attack, and for that matter, it is a wonder all in itself. He has scored twelve touchdowns this year. He is hard to tackle, hard to catch, and his stiff-arm brushes aside would-be stoppers like so much paper. It took at least two Commodore, and usually three, to stop him Saturday. Almost as good as Ed Anderson, who was a wizard at gaining ground about the ends or hitting tackle for a first down, Harold Sparr did not seem as much of a battering ram as usual, but yet he gained something nearly every time given the ball.

The Virginia offense was vindicated Saturday. It had been said that she didn't have one, but somehow she must have found it. At least Vandy thinks so.

"Back to Fundamentals," Is Cry of Hanoverians
HANOVER, N. H., Nov. 10.—Back to the fundamentals! This was the word at Alumni Oval yesterday, when the Dartmouth varsity appeared on the field. In the opinion of the coaches the Green had been playing, and only finish and a thorough drilling in the rudiments are needed to make the team a well-balanced machine.

The power of the backfield has been shown, and with the line improving daily it looks as if Dartmouth will put a strong team on the field against Syracuse on November 20. A new center appeared in the first team line-up in the person of Youngstrom, of Waltham, who has not been used up to date on account of injuries received early in the season.

YALE WILL PROBE CAUSE OF FAILURE

Faculty Wants to Know Why Quinby Lost Authority, and Why Eleven Is Weak.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 10.—According to statements made by members of the faculty today, Yale faces another investigation into football management. The general coaching system will come under the inspection of the faculty immediately after the close of the present season.

The current, unfortunate gridiron season has caused many of the members of the conservative element in the faculty to wonder how such unsatisfactory results could have come from such remarkably strong material, and to seek causes for many failures of the season.

The cause is seeking reasons for the clipping of authority of Frank Quinby, the Yale baseball coach, last spring, and the failure of eight recent football coaches this fall to drill an eleven in up-to-date football.

Many of the faculty members are also displeased at the increasingly large expenses of the football campaign. This feature will be discussed during the coming sessions of the Yale, Harvard, and Princeton eligibility committees, it is believed here.

CHICAGO, Nov. 10.—Captain Huston, part owner of the New York American League club, inspected Cornsake Park today for ideas for the new home of the Yankees, which will probably be built in Queens. Captain Huston declared that the location of the Yankees' new park would be announced within a week or two.

Do Your Collars Crack or Fray?
At the folds there was once a collar weakness which Ide Collars have overcome.
By cutting away two of the inside plies at the point of folding, these points have been made much more pliable in Ide Collars. This permits turning and re-turning again and again in laundering without cracking—thus greatly increasing the wearability of these collars.
That's one reason Ide Collars launder so much better—stand so many washings without fraying—an economical reason which should lead you to wear them. 2 for 25c

Yale's Case Hopeless, Says Former Captain

Fred Daly, Leader in 1910. Blames Alec Wilson As Much As Anybody For Conditions—Warns Elis Not to Expect Wonders From Shevlin.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., Nov. 10.—"Yale is attempting to do something that no sane business man would think of. In calling back Tom Shevlin to New Haven, Yale is trying to bring order out of chaos, but unless Shevlin has got something brand new, his work at New Haven won't amount to a thing," today declared Fred Daly, athletic director at Williams College and captain of the famous Yale eleven of 1910, which held Harvard's great team to a scoreless tie.
Daly asserted in no uncertain terms that whatever hope Yale has in putting itself out of the rut, it should expect little from Shevlin, the man who, Yale believes, will accomplish what is regarded as practically impossible.
Daly has been following the situation at New Haven closely, his work at Williams with the football authorities there and hence "a not give an opinion based on hearsay."

"Shevlin has not been in touch with football for four years," he declared. "How Yale can expect a man to come in and rejuvenate a team that has been going steadily from bad to worse is more than I can see. Shevlin helped us in 1911, but he wasn't the whole show by any means."

"We had the greatest team I ever saw, and when all the men were in shape, the fastest, barring none. There was a game bunch with me that year. Moreover, Shevlin brought along something brand-new, something that had not been heard of in Eastern football. He had the equipment to make good."

"This time he is hardly in the same position as he was in 1911. He has been out of touch with the game for four years, and a coach cannot hope to succeed unless he has been keeping in touch with his work every year. The same is true of Frank Hickey."

"No business man with any sense would think of placing a man in charge of any branch of his business after twenty years of absence from it. That's what Yale is doing in Hickey's case. Furthermore, just because a man was a good player doesn't necessarily mean he will be a good coach. I believe that more good coaches come from men who were good players or else never played the game."

"Houghton at Harvard, Speedy Rush at Princeton, Slane at Chicago, and Zuppke of Illinois are some of these men. They are students of the game, and their ability to handle men has helped them to achieve wonderful success. Both Hickey and Shevlin are out of date. They are not up on modern football."

"There is also the prevailing spirit at New Haven to be reckoned with. A few days ago I was at Bridgeport and talked with Talbot and other Yale men concerning the situation. Captain Wilson is as much to blame as any one. The material he has there isn't pulling together. The men haven't got the old Yale spirit, which went in to win every time."

"If Yale men had the right spirit and if Shevlin by any chance has something new, which I don't believe he has, Yale may make its season better than it started. As it looks now, I don't think it will."

Only expects to go to New Haven at the close of the football season at Williams. He has been his custom ever since he was graduated, and he has been asked to come again this fall.

Mahan and Gil Jan Won't Face Brown

Two Harvard Football Stars Will Watch Princeton Battling Against Yale.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 10.—Eddie Mahan, Harvard's brilliant captain, and Gilman, the star tackle, will not play against Brown here Saturday. Both will witness the Yale-Princeton game at New Haven. Coach Houghton does not believe that Brown will be able to win from the Crimson, even without Mahan and Gilman.

Light work is down for today's practice at the stadium, a long signal drill being expected to consume most of the afternoon. With the exception of Mahan and Gilman, Harvard will face Brown with the same line-up that won from Princeton last Saturday.
